

West Virginia Briefs

MOUNDSVILLE: George Hall, a youth, missed his calling when he started out to be a burglar, police say. He was arrested as he walked out of the Virgin grocery with baskets full of plunder at 3:30 in the morning.

FOLLANSBEE: An experiment that is attracting wide interest among manufacturers is being made at the Follansbee sheet and tin plate plant, that of heating open hearth furnaces with oil instead of gas. It appears to be a success.

GRAFTON: Grafton Elks have planned to hold a fair in their club house lasting from November 14 to 18 inclusive, the proceeds of which will be for charity.

FAIRMONT: A huge gas engine of 18,000 horse power has been set in place at the Monongahela Valley Traction Company's power plant at Hutchinson, making it the largest gas operated electric plant in the United States by fifty per cent. Its fly-wheel weighs 200 tons and is as high as a two-story house. The plant now has a capacity of 30,000 kilowatts of electricity daily.

MOUNDSVILLE: Mrs. Michael Popish has been found guilty by a jury in circuit court of conducting a speak-easy here. The smallest penalty she can get is two months in jail and a fine of $500.

CHARLESTON: The West Virginia Manufacturers Association will hold its annual convention here November 17 and 18. The association includes most of the leading manufacturers of the state. If the association has in mind any legislative enactment to be presented at the January-February session of the legislature it is probable that this matter will be discussed at the meeting.

KEYSER: The county court of Mineral has rejected all the bids submitted for the construction of permanent roads in New Creek district, this county, because they were too high. It is probable that no further attempt will be made to get lower bids, as contractors are bidding up because of the uncertainties of prices for materials and for labor, in addition to the changes of weather.

CHARLESTON: Mrs. Anna B. Haynes, mother of Earl Henry, chief of the West Virginia department of mines, is dead at her home at Canton, Mason county.

WHEELING: Sam True, aged 20 years, an Italian of Cleveland, is under arrest on a white slave charge. He is alleged to have imported Pearl Miller, 23 years, of Akron, to a disorderly house here.

CHARLESTON: Under the army regulation bill, which will go into effect Wednesday, November 1, West Virginia is expected to furnish 1,112 recruits every year. Kanawha and six immediately surrounding counties are to furnish 100 of these.

CHARLESTON: Union miners of District No. 17, United Mine Workers of America, have nominated three candidates for the presidency of the district. They are: Thomas Cairns, former president; C. C. Griffith, former vice president, both of Charleston; and Frank Kenny, of Cabin Creek. Ben Morris, of Marmet, and Everett Stover, of Dorothy, are candidates for secretary-treasurer. The election will be held in December by referendum vote.

CHARLESTON: Hearings on complaints of shipper by packet steamers in the Kanawha river has been set for the November session of the public service commission. Answers to these complaints have been filed with the commission by packet owners.

NOSE CLOGGED FROM A COLD OR CATARRH

Apply Cream in Nostrils To Open Up Air Passages.

Ah! What relief! Your clogged nostrils open right up, the air passages of your head are clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, mucous discharge, headache, dryness—no struggling for breath at night, your cold or catarrh is gone.

Don't stay stuffed up! Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Ely's Cream Balm is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer has been seeking. It's just splendid. Advertisement.

UNHAPPY IS EXPERIENCE OF SOME GREEKS

Similar to That of Those That Were Visited upon Their Forefathers Years Ago.

(SPECIAL TO THE TELEGRAM)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—"If the reports of refugees arriving in the city of Mytilene, on the Aegean island of Lesbos, are worthy of credence, the Greek citizens of the flourishing Asia Minor seaport of Alvali are undergoing unhappy experiences closely akin to those visited upon their forefathers just ninety-five years ago," says a war geography bulletin of the National Geographic Society.

"It was in 1821 that Greeks and Turks clashed in Alvali with the result that many of the former were massacred while others were sold into slavery. Now, according to cable despatches which have reached America via Athens, 500 prominent Alvalians have been deported into the interior after being subjected to 'the roughest treatment.'"

At the beginning of the present war Alvali, with its prosperous population of 20,000, largely Greek, was one of the most thriving cities of the Levant, enjoying an extensive trading trade with Constantinople and Smyrna, and exporting quantities of olive oil, grain and wool. The town is on the northeast shore of the Strait of Mytilene, and its harbor is protected from the prevailing winds of this region by the Moschoni islands, beyond which lies the Bay of Andramyti, with Mt. Ida of historic note at its head.

Where Built.
Alvali, whose Greek name is Kydonia, is built on the site of the ancient town of Heraclea, but of far more interest than the latter city is a once noted metropolis—twenty-five miles to the southeast—the splendid Pergamus or Pergamum of the third century before the Christian era.

Pergamus (the modern Bergama) occupied a magnificent eminence overlooking the fertile valley of the Caicus river, and was fifteen miles from the sea. Its great acropolis was crowned with many buildings—temples, palaces and theaters. Here excavators have discovered the remains of the great Altar of Zeus Soter with its wonderful relief sculpture telling a running story of the struggle of the gods with the giants. This relief has been restored and taken to Berlin where it is prized as one of the greatest archaeological treasures of the German capital.

Pergamus, whose modern successor is a town about the same size as Alvali, owes its first impulse to greatness to Lysimachus, one of Alexander the Great's generals who stored in the strong fort then existing on the acropolis, a part of his immense treasure. He placed a trusted but unworthy subject in charge of it. This was Philaetorus of Thium who seized a favorable opportunity to rebel against his master and before the latter could put down the revolt he was beset by other enemies and lost his life on the plains of Corus, where his body was guarded for many days by his faithful dog—a familiar story of canine fidelity.

Principally Grows.
Philaetorus managed to keep on good terms with his more powerful neighbors and his tiny principality grew appreciably during his twenty years' reign. He was succeeded by his nephew Eumenes in 253 B. C., and he in turn by Attalus I, who, after defeating the Gauls in an important battle, assumed the title of king. The newly-styled monarch now attached himself to Rome as a staunch friend and admirer and Pergamus's great day was at hand. Art flourished and the commerce of the kingdom was extensive.

"The last king of Pergamus, Attalus III reigned only five years, and by his will he gave his throne to Rome (133 B. C.). That power annexed the kingdom as a province, but for more than two hundred years the capital was one of the three great cities of the region, the other two being Ephesus and Smyrna. During all this time the citizens were as loyal to the Roman cause as had been their sovereigns."
